Summary: A series of Zootopia one-shots. They will all have their own description (except the first one cause i forgot). There probably won't be any NickxJudy in this though. But there may be some NickxFinnick, but I dunno yet.

Zootopia one-shots

Judy knocked on the door to Nicks' basement apartment and looked around as she waited. There was mold on the wall and paint was peeling off. She shook her head and smiled when the door opened. She was confused when she didn't see Nick. She looked down and raised an eyebrow when she saw Nicks' old partner Finnick. The small fox eyed her up and down, focusing on her badge for a moment. She shifts slightly, feeling weird wearing her uniform while standing right in front of a con man. Finnick grunts slightly and nods for her to follow him in. She enters the apartment and shuts the door behind her. She turns and finally gets to see her best friends' apartment. It wasn't as messy as she was expecting. She was expecting there to be clothes everywhere and it to be super messy. But it was clean. There were a few pieces of clothing on the floor, and a couple empty pop cans on the ground, but that was it. It looked lived in.

Finnick pounded on what Judy assumed was Nicks' bedroom door before going into the kitchen. Judy followed the small fox into the kitchen as she waited for her partner. "Soâ€¦" Judy wasn't sure how to make conversation. "You're Nicks' roommate?" The small fox was rooting around in the fridge for something.

"Yea. Why else would I be here at 8am?" He pulls out a bottle of orange juice. Well, she THOUGHT it was orange juice. But when he poured them both a glass she was shocked at what it was.

"Carrot juice?" He nods as he sips his drink. She smiles and sips her own drink, staring at the fennec fox. She liked to think that the two of them had become semi-good friends over the year that she had known

Nick. The small fox had become kinder towards her, although he was still quite rude in her opinion. But Nick had told her that he was like that with everyone, and that she shouldn't take it personally. She snapped back to reality when she heard someone clear their throat, blushing slightly when she realized she had been staring at Finnick the whole time. She muttered an apology and the fox laughed loudly. She jumped slightly and turned around when she heard the bedroom door slam.

"'morning Carrots. Sorry I took so long, but you're kinda early." He smiles and takes a swig from Finnick's glass, earning a glare from his ex-partner. Nick laughs and rubs his friend's head and gets punched in the ribs. He groans quietly but still smiles. "Ready to go?" Nick asks with strained breath. Judy nods and rinses her glass before hugging Finnick.

"Thanks for the juice Finnick!" He grumbles in response and Nick smiles a little when he sees his roommate blushing a little. She grabs Nick's hand and drags him towards the door, giving him only a moment to have farewell to his friend before he was off to another long day at work.
